

Foreword

Søren Dietz

The Danish Institute at Athens was inaugurated April the 2nd 1992 by the Danish Minister of Education, Mr. Bertel Haarder and the Greek Minister of Culture, Mrs. Anna Psarouda-Benaki. Already in March same year the Greek Ministry of Culture acknowledged the Institute as “The Danish Institute at Athens for Classical studies, Archaeology and Cultural History”.

The Proceedings of the Danish Institute at Athens of which the first volume is hereby presented, is planned to be published every other year. Topics to be dealt with will mainly concern Archaeology, but also contributions within Ancient History, Classical Philology and other related topics will be accepted. Priority will be given to contributions concerning current Danish programmes of research on Ancient Greek Topics, Danish (or Greek/Danish) field Projects in Greece and articles related to Denmark and Greek/ Danish relations. The Editor will be the Director in office. Guidelines for contributors can be ordered from the editor.

Athens, April 1995

Acknowledgements:

I want to express my gratitude to the Managing Committee of the British School in Athens for permission to publish the Knossos nodules here. I wish to thank Dr. Kritsas for facilitating my studies in the Heraklion Museum. My warmest thanks are also due to Judith Weingarten for correcting the English text, and for her valuable comments and suggestions.
